Perhaps it was an off day for the larint throwers, but their performance was poor indeed. Buffalo Bill's lariat throwing is superb, and his shooting something mar-velous. I had begged and entreated our party to go, and upbraided them for lack of sense, but I bow to each and all as a female Solomon since that ride. I left them at the gate, paid my little price and get into the car. It seemed all right as got into the car. It seemed all right as we traveled over the horizontal portion, but as we went up and the earth fell down, and the great wheel wobbled a little against the sky on the other side and bumped and groaned, I said what few prayers I could think of, and held on to the iron bars. Closing Argument in the Heath Grant Case-The Canada de Los Alamos Case Submitted.

In the U. S. court of private land claims, Judge J. B. Cessna, of Hastings. Neb., made the concluding argument yesterday afternoon in favor of the claimants of the Juan Gid or Heath grant, involving a large area in the Mesilla valley. He spoke for two hours, making an able presentation of his case, and sustaining his position with many authorities. He claimed that under the law of 1823 two authorities had the right to make grants the Emperor to impressaries and the Ayuntamiento to colonists. That there were no previsions in this law, as there were in all other Mexican laws, requiring were in all other Mexican laws, requiring grants made by the town council to be subsequently approved by a higher authority, and that any attempt to impose such a provision was illegal and void. He said the Ayuntamiento could make grants with the knowledge or instructions of the executive.

tive. The proceedings in this grant, he said, show this: Heath had applied to the executive for this same land before the law of 1823 was enacted. Subsequently this law was sent to the town council duties with zeal and ability, but he has directing them to publish and carry it out been particularly fortunate in that he has and make the grant to Heath. That these been the means of bringing about changes the giving of possession and issuing of title papers were conclusive that such instructions had been given. This fact, he said, leaves the case res adjudicata, and it can not now be inquired into her. it can not now be inquired into by any court; that the title in Heath was perfect in fee simple and that the revolutionary government of Mexico could not destroy said title by killing the count of the case res adjudicata, and it can not now be inquired into by any court; that the title in Heath was perfect in fee simple and that the revolutionary government of Mexico could not destroy said title by killing the country and service ability.
